Unforeseen Conditions Met and Death Ended Uncompleted Task.

Henry P. Davison, member of th banking firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., died yesterday afternoon in his home at Peacock Point in Locust Valley. Long Island. Death was due to a tumor in the brain. He was under the influence of the anæsthetic and on the operating table when the end came. "Yes, they have told me, Mr. Davison," replied the woman. It is said here eyes filled when she spoke and that tears came into the banker's eyes when he saw her weep.

He sat among the doctors at the Peacock Point house on Friday night swapping jokes and, according to Martin Egan, publicity man for the Morgan firm, telling humorous stories. Despite the fact he knew, almost as well as the doctors, that the chances were he was not going to be alive twenty-four hours later, he slept peacefully. And yesterday morning when he awoke he suggested to Dr. Elsberg that they postpone the operation that they might go fishing in the Sound almost under his windows.

The Bonus Up in the Air.

The McCumber bonus bill was taken to the President yesterday by a delegation consisting of McCumber, Lodge, Curtis and Watson. These Senators made their way to the White House with a sense of duty and some hope; they came away in depression. They got no encouragement from the President. Neither did they get turned down flat. It wasn't quite so raw as that. Seeing what happened to McCumber and the others Smoot concluded this wasn't a good day to tackle the President with his bonus bill. He announces he will take a chance on it Monday.

The truth of the matter is that so far as the bonus is concerned everything now rests with the President, so why worry?-Editorial.
